If the contractor believes that any particular work is not within the scope of the project, is a material change, or will otherwise require more compensation to the contractor, the contractor must immediately notify the City in writing of this belief. If the City believes that the particular work is within the scope of the contract as written, the contractor will be ordered to and shall continue with the work as changed and at the cost stated for the work within the scope.

41. EXCEPTIONS: Proposers taking exception to any part or section of the solicitation shall indicate such exceptions on the proposal form. Failure to indicate any exception will be interpreted as the proposer's intent to comply fully with the requirements as written. Conditional or qualified proposals, unless specifically allowed, shall be subject to rejection in whole or in part.

42. FAILURE TO DELIVER: In the event of the contractor to fail to deliver services in accordance with the contract terms and conditions, the City, after due oral or written notice, may procure the services from other sources and hold the contractor responsible for any resulting purchase and administrative costs. This remedy shall be in addition to any other remedies that the City may have.

43. FAILURE TO ENFORCE: Failure by the City at any time to enforce the provisions of the contract shall not be construed as a waiver of any such provisions. Such failure to enforce shall not affect the validity of the contract or any part thereof or the right of the City to enforce any provision at any time in accordance with its terms.

44. FORCE MAJEURE: The contractor shall not be held responsible for failure to perform the duties and responsibilities imposed by the contract due to legal strikes, fires, riots, rebellions and acts of God beyond the control of the contractor, unless otherwise specified in the contract.

The amount is only an estimate and the contractor understands and agrees that the City is under no obligation to the contractor to buy any amount of services as a result of having provided this estimate or of having any typical or measurable requirement in the past. The contractor further understands and agrees that the City may require services in excess of the estimated annual contract amount and that the quantity actually used whether in excess of, or less than, the estimated annual contract amount and that the quantity actually used shall not give rise to any claim for compensation other than the total of the unit prices in the contract for the quantity actually used.

51. TERMINATION FOR CONVENIENCE: The performance of work under the contract may be terminated by the City in whole or in part whenever the City determines that termination is in the City's best interest. Any such termination shall be effected by the delivery to the contractor of a written notice of termination of at least seven (7) days before the date of termination, specifying the extent to which performance of the work under the contract is terminated and the date upon which such termination becomes effective. The seven-day period will begin upon the mailing of notice by the City. If the contractor fails to cure the default within the seven (7) days specified in the notice and the contract is terminated for failure to perform satisfactorily, the contractor shall be entitled to receive compensation for all reasonable, allocable and allowable contract services satisfactorily performed by the contractor up to the date of termination that were accepted by the City prior to the termination. In the event the City terminates the contract because of the default of the contractor, the contractor shall be liable for all excess costs that the City is required to expend to complete the work under contract.

Scope of Work

The City of Naples is seeking Proposals from experienced firms to provide the following services:

1. Review the City's existing water quality sampling programs for upland stormwater, Naples Bay, and Moorings Bay in order to provide recommendations for modifications to those programs, if necessary, in a manner that would improve the ability to statistically analyze collected data from water bodies and stormwater flows in order to produce scientifically defensible results. Statistically analyze Naples Bay and Moorings Bay water quality data to determine trends over time for key parameters and compare among sites for pollutant hotspots.
2. Review the City's seagrass and trawling data and determine statistical trends over time, make comparisons among sites, and determine whether or not there is a statistical relationship of that data to water quality data;
3. Review existing water quality and quantity databases related to fresh water inflows from the Golden Gate Main Canal, City and County stormwater pump stations, and City lake discharges and determine whether statistically significant changes have occurred over time in the receiving water bodies;
4. Review City implemented best management practices and water quality improvement projects and through statistical analysis to determine whether these projects are or are not having impacts on water quality. Furthermore, quantify the impact in terms of pollutant reduction to the receiving water body;
5. Collect/sample City lake and pump station discharges, provide laboratory analyses of the samples using a NELAC certified laboratory review and process all field and laboratory data, and calculate pollutant loading to receiving water bodies.

Background

According to the Florida Department of Environmental Protection, the number one pollutant in Florida is stormwater runoff. Stormwater carries all manner of substances from the land into the water. This includes chemicals from fertilizers and pesticides, oil products from vehicles, heavy metals from a variety of sources, bacteria, and yard vegetation. Naples Bay and the marine segment of the Gordon River are identified as an impaired water bodies for copper and iron. Naples Bay is also impaired for bacteria. We also know that Naples Bay receives an enormous amount of fresh water flows from the Golden Gate main canal system. In fact, the drainage basin for Naples Bay was once approximately 10 square miles; today it is about 120 square miles. Nutrient criteria has also been set for Naples Bay at TN = 0.57 ppm, TP = 0.045 ppm, Chlorophyll a = 4.3 ppm.

The City of Naples stormwater system consists of numerous public and private stormwater ponds that are linked to the Gordon River, Naples Bay or the Gulf of Mexico. In January of 2006, the City's Natural Resources Division established a water quality sampling program that is considered to be scientific and technically valid by FDEP. Since that time, the water quality of Naples Bay has been continuously sampled on a monthly basis at eight (8) sites. Initially, eight (8) sites were measured one month and eight (8) different sites the following month. In 2009, five (5) of the sites were relocated to the City's boundaries or stormwater outfalls to measure stormwater inputs into the bay from the County. Three (3) sites remained as is to measure ambient conditions in the bay. Since that time, these eight (8) sites have been sampled monthly. The City measures turbidity, salinity, temperature, dissolved oxygen, and other physical parameters, and have water samples laboratory-tested for various nutrients, bacteria, and heavy metals. Please see the data summary in Exhibit A. Having met the vigorous quality assurance and quality control requirements of the Florida Department of Environmental Protection (FDEP), the data is entered into the official State of Florida data storage and retrieval system (STORET). The City analyzes this data to assess trends and make management decisions concerning the restoration of Naples Bay. FDEP also analyzes this data to make decisions on impairments and to establish thresholds for pollutant criteria. FDEP's use of this data has critical implications for the City of Naples, Collier County, and any entity discharging into estuaries. Therefore, the City has particular interest in the statistical accuracy and representation of the data for use in determining the health of the entire Naples Bay system. Also, it is important to weigh the costs to the City to acquire and process statistically representative data.

In 2009, the City of Naples entered into a cooperative agreement with the Rookery Bay National Estuarine Research Reserve (RBNERR) to begin sampling fauna in Naples Bay by trawling (pulling a fishing net along the bottom behind a boat) in an effort to determine what species are living in the bay and in what numbers. In addition, species diversity among sites can be determined and compared. Every other month, the City collects species data by trawling at stratified random sites in the bay and noting species composition of the catch, numbers of individuals, and their sizes. After two years of trawling, a very preliminary analysis of the data was made. Please see Exhibit B. It revealed that there was a great amount of variability in the data, and that while there were differences observed within Naples Bay and among the various water bodies of the region, they were, for the most part, not statistically significant because of that high level of variability. However, there were trends. These trends indicated that species diversity and numbers increased from north to south (Gordon River to Gordon Pass), and that areas with oyster reefs and seagrasses are the most diverse parts of the bay. This scientific analysis was a first look, and the variability in the data indicated the need to increase the data set in order to ascertain statistical significance. Scientifically valid datasets are vital to the measurement of change and response to management actions such as the diversion of the Golden Gate Canal or construction of habitat islands.

Since the 4th quarter of 2010, The City has been continuously sampling upland stormwater sources at lakes, pump stations and within portions of the stormwater conveyance system. Exhibit C contains the City's 2013 Upland Water Quality Report. Exhibit D contains the most recent scope of services performed for the City by its professional consulting firm.

Specifications by Tasks

Task 1: The City would like the selected firm to review each water quality sampling program (Naples Bay, Moorings Bay, and upland lakes/pump stations) and provide professional input and recommendations regarding sampling locations, sampling frequency, sampling parameters, and any other factor that may improve the representation of the water body or flow and improve the statistical analysis of the data. While the Department is looking to refine its water quality sampling program to achieve an accurate representation of each system, it does not expect that refinements will require significantly more resource allocation. In fact, resource allocation (in terms of staff time and Department funding) should be an important factor when considering improvements to the existing sampling programs. The Department's position has been and will continue to be a focus of resources on developing programs that improve water quality. The water quality monitoring programs are important tools by which to gauge our effectiveness. Further, it is also important to note that the City's monitoring results are used by regulators to determine impairment and pollutant loading thresholds

Task 2: Perform statistical analyses of water quality data, trawling data and seagrass data collected by the City of Naples from Naples Bay and Moorings Bay. The Department's goal is to characterize the health of Naples Bay and Moorings Bay by understanding the relationships between stormwater runoff and the ambient conditions of these water bodies.

- a. Through the use of innovative and/or advanced statistical methodologies, determine whether or not there are any significant trends or relationships in the data over time.
- b. Through the use of innovative and/or advanced statistical methodologies, determine whether there is any significant relationship between the water quality data and both the trawling data and seagrass data.
- c. Prepare a report that describes the analytical process used, why it was used, conclusions drawn from the analysis of the data, and support for those conclusions. This may be included in the reporting for Task #4.

Task 3: Design and carry out a sampling program for the City's stormwater retention ponds and stormwater pump stations that can be utilized in the statistical analysis of the water quality of the City's stormwater runoff and in calculating pollutant loading.

- a. Using data previously collected by the City, determine the size of the data set necessary and amount of sampling needed to achieve a statistically significant analysis of that data.
- b. Collect water quality samples as needed of the same parameters and from the same lakes as identified in the data provided to enable statistically valid analysis.
- c. Include a discussion of the analytical process used and why it was used, conclusions drawn from the analysis of the data, and support for those conclusions. This may be included in the reporting for Task #4.

Task 4: Reporting

- a. Stormwater water quality report (frequency to be determined) with annual pollutant loading analysis
- b. Naples Bay report on water quality trends and pollutant levels
- c. Naples Bay report on relationships between and among water quality, seagrass, and trawling data
- d. Moorings Bay report on water quality trends and pollutant levels
- e. Moorings Bay report on relationships between and among water quality and trawling data

PROCESS

- Responses to this RFP will be received no later than August 21, 2014.
- A selection committee will be appointed by the City Manager. The selection committee will meet in the "sunshine" to discuss and rank the top three firms in order of preference based on written proposals.
- The City may choose to interview the highest ranked firms before a final ranking is established.
- The final ranking by the selection committee may be completed by August 29th or earlier. Staff will then formalize a scope and negotiate a fee with the top ranked firm. If a fair and reasonable fee can be achieved, staff will present a contract with the number one ranked firm to the City Council September, 2014.
